Silhouette is a surreal reminiscence of a woman's sensual curves that arise designed in an eye catching dining chair.

The representation of several realities seen simultaneously from a single point of view has become fascinating for several 20th century artists like Paul Klee who drawn musicians and fragments of their musical instruments as an integral part of their own bodies.

The joint dimension of people and objects strongly influenced the Silhouette dining chair, whose elegant wooden structure uncovers parts of a woman's body who sits on it. The slightly curved seat draws an inviting smile that harmonizes with the structure, revealing the movement of the hips, as parts of a female body. Silhouette shows contours of a mysterious profile and presents the observer with feminine sensuality.
